About Stride Outside

Stride Outside is a nationwide fundraising challenge encouraging people to spend 30 minutes outdoors every day for 30 days to improve their mental wellbeing.

This year, Stride Outside will play directly into the stigma associated with stopping for a mental health break, by issuing a simple challenge: dare to rest. It's the act of choosing a gentle float in the pool while others race for personal bests. The freedom to stroll without a destination, or the quiet rebellion of not checking your emails while on a walk.

The challenge engaged hundreds of participants last year, raising over $43,000 that went towards resources and vital equipment that supports the wellbeing of the people you support throughout Australia.
